

Who Would Have Thought?

Who would have thought
That in this lovely town
A tiny strange organism
Would try to bring us down

Who would have thought
That the grandma next door
Would be so reluctant
To go to the store

Who would have thought
That the world might unite
Under terrible circumstances
To support in the fight.

So here we all are
With one common foe
Staying connected
But not toe to toe

Sharing what we can
From a distance, by phone,
By email or texting,
So we're not all alone

Even more thankful for
Police, schools, medical, fire
The folks we can count on
When circumstances are dire

And social distancing
Such a pain... we can tell.
But well worth the effort
To keep us all well.

So let us all hunker down
Pay heed to the rules
Give support when we can
Not be stubborn like mules.

We will get past this
And through challenging days
We may learn new connections,
New friends, new doors, new ways
